Sienna Signorello

Third Year | Innovation, Technology & Design | University of Miami sas4058@miami.edu
| +1 (773) 318-4017

Dear Prospective Host Organization,

I am seeking an internship in Paris through CEA CAPA that connects my interests in fashion, marketing, and advertising. As an Innovation, Technology & Design student at the University of Miami, with minors in Art History and Marketing, I am drawn to how visual choices shape people's connection to a brand. I hope to build a career combining creative direction, technology, and entrepreneurship. Working in Paris would help me understand how cultural context influences style and communication, while challenging me to adapt my ideas for audiences beyond those I know at home.

My experiences have taught me to approach creative work by listening first. Styling customers at Rock 'N Rags showed me how to turn someone's preferences and the needs of an occasion into thoughtful recommendations. Designing merchandise for my sorority and my major's Student Advisory Board also taught me to translate a group's identity into a shared visual design. Through brand innovation work at Nicholas Moriarty Interiors and developing my own photo-sharing app, Can I Post This?, I have learned to move between creative decisions and practical problem-solving. As an artist liaison for Miami MoCAAD's Soul Basel VR exhibition, I communicated with more than ten international Black artists and the technical team to help preserve the artworks' histories and cultural context. That experience reinforced the importance of clear communication, careful representation, and follow-through when people bring different perspectives to a project.

I would welcome responsibilities such as researching audiences and trends, creating social media or campaign content, supporting visual merchandising, and helping coordinate creative projects. I am also willing to contribute through everyday organizational tasks and explore unfamiliar areas as the team's needs evolve. I hope to strengthen my ability to develop campaigns, respond constructively to feedback, and collaborate across cultures. Having studied French throughout school, I am eager to become more confident speaking it in daily and professional settings. Thank you for considering my interest. I would appreciate the opportunity to discuss in an interview how my curiosity, initiative, and creative experience could support your organization.

Sincerely,

Sienna Signorello